Youth Force Bible and Health Camp Teaches Kids About Healthy Food Choices

The future health and vitality of Anson County depends greatly on teaching our children how to make the right healthy choices now. The incidences of type 2 diabetes and obesity among our children is alarming. Research reveals they will go to an early grave unless parents, churches, and schools wake up and take action.

Pathway to Peace Ministries has taken action to address these major health problems and other social issues that plague our community through its Youth Force Bible and Health Camp. This camp has inspired hundreds of children in Anson County since 2007.

Pastor Cary Rodgers of Pathway to Peace Ministries and the camp's director says, "It is our goal to teach our children about ultimate success physically, spiritually, and mentally through healthy lifestyle education, math, reading, exercise, and Bible class. There is no way you can do that with fast food dinners, burgers, hot dogs, soda and sugary killer junk food. Ultimate success begins with making the right healthy choices."

Every summer the Youth Force Bible and Health Camp serves plant-based nutritious and delicious meals. Research supports that this type of diet along with an active lifestyle will reverse diabetes, and obesity, improve behavior and grades.

The Youth Force Bible and Health Summer Camp was held for 2 weeks at the Community Center on the corner of Sikes Avenue and Stahl Street, across the street from First Baptist Church in Wadesboro, from June 11 to 22. It was for kids ages 5 to 13, held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. daily. You can register your children the first day of camp. The camp is free although donations are appreciated.

"I love and my daughter loves coming to camp. She has learned so much in just 2 weeks," said parent Shemetra Underwood.
