Extension Notes Take Advantage of Local Peaches

North Carolina Peaches are one of the best things about summer. Ask anybody driving through Anson County on Highway 74 headed to the beach, and they will tell you, "It's Peach Time!" For just a short time, from around the first of June through most of August, North Carolina peaches are available. And Anson County is fortunate to have an abundance of locally grown, fresh, sweet, juicy peaches. Peaches are delicious as a snack or in a dessert. They are bursting with flavor!

Summer just would not be the same without the sweet taste of Anson County peaches.

When picking fresh peaches, handle fruit carefully because peaches bruise very easily and decay develops rapidly. When selecting, look for peaches with a creamy to gold undercolor that best indicates ripeness.

The amount of red blush on fruit depends on the variety and is not always a sign of ripeness. Two other indicators of ripeness are a well-defined crease and a good fragrance. Select fruit that has begun to soften for immediate use. Firm, ripe fruit can be held a few days at room temperature to ripen further. Never pick peaches with a green undercolor since they will not ripen well. They will shrivel, become flabby and never achieve a good flavor.

When storing, peaches should be held at 32-35°F in high humidity. Fully ripened peaches should be refrigerated immediately and kept there until ready for consumption. Sound and mature, but not overripe peaches can be expected to hold 1-2 weeks at 32-35° F with little adverse effects. Peaches deteriorate rapidly when stored for longer periods.

When ripening, a room temperature of 65-70°F is best for mature peaches. There is no gain in sugar content once a peach is picked from a tree. Its ripening process consists primarily of softening, developing juiciness, and developing flavor. So, the riper a peach is at harvest, the more sugar it will contain. Remember, once a mature peach begins to ripen, it never stops; but you can slow the rate of ripening by storing it in low temperatures.

When preparing, wash peaches gently, peel, and remove pits. Handle carefully to avoid bruising. To peel a peach, dip it in boiling water for 30 seconds, then in cold water. The peel should slide off easily. To keep sliced peaches from darkening, dip in lemon juice or ascorbic acid.

A medium-sized fresh peach is full of vitamins and minerals, including vitamin A, vitamin C, riboflavin, and beta carotene. Peaches are also low in calories, fat-free, sodium-free, and cholesterol-free.

So enjoy Anson County peaches this summer! They are good to you and for you! And, by purchasing locally you will be supporting our local producers. That way, everybody wins!
