

Morven Elementary School Summer Camp “Building the Whole Child”

A three week Summer Camp at Morven Elementary School (MES) was filled with engaged learning activities that supported and provided expansions of the core instruction of Reading and Math through Science and Social Studies. Engaging activities made learning FUNdamental for all students at camp.

Morven Elementary School’s dedicated staff cultivated a drive to learn which provided a leading force of attendance and academic growth for our students who attended Summer Camp.

With the help of a village of people, students spent much time in the community indulging in positive activities. Dr. Covia Boyd provided Taekwondo classes for MES students throughout the summer. Taekwondo’s ability to instill stamina, drive, resilience and patience continuously prepared students for the new school year to come. Leon Gatewood (Founder of the HOLLA! Community Center), made sure the doors of the center were open as students poured in to meet Morven Elementary School’s teacher, Dr. Boyd, for an exciting opportunity to better themselves for a college and career future.

MES students also enjoyed Jr. Chef Camp at the HOLLA! Center with local chefs, Valencia Garmon and Aaliyah Crawford. The camp experience entailed the learning of basic and technical culinary techniques that encouraged professionalism by focusing on customer service, leadership, and accountability in the workforce.

Mr. Dekwan Burns, PE Coach at Morven Elementary, took on the task of training a group of fifth graders to travel to other districts to participate in competitive basketball tournaments, where they won several championships. Travel ball gives students an opportunity to improve skills, develop friendships, accumulate daily activities, acquire life lessons and travel throughout the summer.

With the help of the community, MES students were continuously provided education strategies that recognized the connections between the Lil Lions’ social, emotional, cognitive, and academic development in preparation of a successful 2024-2025 school year.
