Plans Progress for Anson County Animal Shelter, Halleluiah!

Anson County is the only county in the region without a properly managed and running animal shelter. With the current location open only a few hours per week, and with one animal control officer on staff, the overwhelming number of animals is too much to handle. Unfortunately for those animals, they are being euthanized at a 96% rate, a number far too large for anyone to ignore any longer. I wrote about this very problem in November of 2011, with little to no success. But at last the ball is officially rolling! Thanks to many concerned citizens, a proactive county manager and a board of commissioners ready to take action.

During their September meeting the County Commissioners detailed their plans for an Animal Shelter here in Anson County. County Manager Lawrence Gatewood told his increasingly alarming findings as they pertain to strays, euthanasia, inability to offer rescue or even shelter animals at the current time.

Gatewood said, "We have formed an animal shelter planning team, with the objective to build or create an animal shelter with an annual budget of $250,000, that will be staffed 24/7. We should not let the cost stand in our way of doing the right thing. We have an issue here and it needs to be dealt with. Our vision can become reality by using county funds, where there is a healthy balance. We can also use timber sales from 89 acres in Lilesville. The staff will be funded out of the general operating budget, which should avoid a tax hike on our citizens."

The project may seem daunting at first, but the commission has a great plan of action in progress, which was unanimously voted on at their last meeting. Gatewood said he had received countless calls, emails, etc. from our citizens, and he believes this plan can be achieved by the end of this year.

The building and location target includes the former Brown Creek Animal Hospital located on Highway 74 in Polkton. This site would save time on the construction of a new facility because it is perfectly set up for this exact purpose. Other assignments include the inspection of the buildings, and proposed staff and equipment needs, which will be reported on at the October meeting.

Gatewood shared, "Chesterfield County which had similar issues to ours several years ago, is now running successfully and saving animals at a rate of 98%! Mrs. Danielle Bowe has made a huge turnaround there and I have seen the miraculous achievements they have made. I am very optimistic that we can duplicate their success, and I am very enthusiastic for Anson County to follow their lead."

As an animal lover, rescuer and advocate I am very pleased to see this action finally being brought to the table. Inhumane treatment of animals is against the law, but in these parts there is little we can do about the enormous number of strays, mistreatment of animals by their owners, and high put down rate due to lack of staffing and facilities. Undoubtedly many of you voiced the same concerns and have at last made your voices heard.

We join Mr. Gatewood in his excitement and enthusiasm to see this project come to fruition, at last. Halleluiah!

Wadesboro Fire Department to Install Free Smoke Alarms

Fire Chief Jimmy Burns of the Wadesboro Fire Department would like to announce that the department has been awarded new smoke alarms from the North Carolina Department of Insurance Office of State Fire Marshal. The fire department will be canvassing at risk communities to insure that homes have working smoke alarms. The goal is to insure that every level of the home has working smoke alarms, and to replace smoke alarms that are more than 10 years old. The Wadesboro Fire Department will begin canvassing the Wade Mill Community during fire prevention week.

The alarms are being provided by the North Carolina Department of Insurance through a federal fire prevention grant that was awarded to the Office of State Fire Marshal. The goal of this program is to properly install long life, battery-powered smoke alarms in homes that do not have working alarms to protect the lives of local citizens.

Each week, staff from the Wadesboro Fire Department will go door-to-door to ask residents to allow firefighters into their homes to check their smoke alarms. If any smoke alarms need to be replaced, new alarms will be installed in the proper locations. If no one is home at the time of the visit, a notification tag will be left on the front door to notify the residents that the fire department has stopped by for a courtesy check of their smoke alarms.

For additional information about the smoke alarm installation program, call the fire station at 704-694-2167.
