

Dust Off Your Cowboy Boots, its Barn Blast January 31

This is a release from the Anson County Partnership for Children: Barn Blast will be held Friday, January 31st from 5:30pm to 11:30 pm in the Ingram Room at SPCC's Lockhart-Taylor Center in Wadesboro. Tickets for the annual Barn Blast fundraiser are available now at the Anson County Partnership for Children.

This country-themed night of fun features games, dinner, dancing, and both silent and live auctions! Barn Blast classics like Head and Tails and new favorites like the Wine Pull are back by popular demand. Reserved tables for 8 are available for $500 and individual tickets can be purchased for $65.

Poisson, Poisson, & Bower, LLC and Uwharrie Bank will kick-off the night of fun as Presenting Sponsors.

"Barn Blast is sure to be a fun-filled night for all in attendance with an important purpose in mind. Barn Blast provides resources for our youngest child in our community. The success of Barn Blast is a testament to the determination and love of Anson County," said Caroline Goins, ACPC Executive Director.

Sponsorship opportunities are available and tax deductible. The Partnership welcomes donations of auction items for the live or silent auctions as well. Guests can purchase tickets and sponsorships online by visiting www.ansonchildren.org and following the prompts.

All proceeds benefit the Partnership's early childhood educational programming. These programs include but are not limited to Dolly Parton's Imagination Library which mails a book each month to over 1000 children in Anson County.

Be sure to purchase your Barn Blast tickets before they sell out! Check out the Partnership's Facebook page to view auction items and updates about Barn Blast. Don't Fall Behind on Emergency Prep During Daylight Time Changes

Disaster can strike at any time, in any season. Practicing emergency plans regularly and updating emergency supplies semi-annually is an important and even lifesaving habit to keep.

Clocks will be moved backward by one hour at 2 o'clock a.m. on Sunday, November 3, signifying that we're inching closer to winter. The changes in Daylight Time happens twice a year and are perfect times to check through your home to ensure you have the proper tools to help you through an emergency.

Emergency items can be quickly used up throughout the year, especially during hurricane season. If Hurricane Dorian didn't deplete your emergency kit stash, now is the perfect time to refresh, restock or simply start building an emergency. As you are checking your clocks, check around the house for items that are key components of an emergency kit: Bottled water, non-perishable foods, first aid items, flashlight, personal hygiene necessities, extra batteries, blankets, etc. By checking your emergency supplies twice a year, you can ensure you won't run into expired food or are missing other necessities when you need them most.

However, the time isn't the only thing you should be changing during daylight savings. Smoke and carbon monoxide detectors run on batteries and can only do their job while the batteries last. Replace the batteries in all detectors during the time change every year. Once the batteries are replaced, test each system to ensure it is working properly. Also check the manufacturer's recommended replacement age. If your detector is past it's prime, it may be time to invest in a new one. If the batteries still have some charge left, save them for children's toys, the remote or other electronic devices.

During the change to fall Daylight Standard Time, some say you "gain an hour," but make sure you takes these easy steps to make sure you don't fall behind on emergency preparedness.
